BIG VICTORY FOR THE BAXTER CO.

Judge Sanborn Decides Against Northern Michigan Men in Their $35,000 Suit.

In the suit of Joseph H. Winter of Negaunee, Mich., and Randall P. Brownson of Ishpeming, promoters of the so-called "Baxter pool," against the Baxter Mining Co., which was on trial at the U. S. court at Madison, Judge Sanborn today rendered a decision in favor of the defendant company on all points involved. He finds no fraud or misrepresentation on the part of any of the defendants and not only dismisses the plaintiffs' bill of complaint but also allows the defendants' cross bill in full. This constitutes a sweeping victory for the Baxter company both with regard to the question of fraud and the title. The plaintiffs in the suit had paid $10,000 on the purchase price and invested about $25,000 in buildings and machinery. When the deal for the purchase fell through they brought suit to recover $35,000, making preposterous charges of misrepresentation. The cross-bill relates the surplus remaining after expenses had been paid while the Michigan men were operating the mine and will be determined by a master in chancery. The Messrs. Parker, Palmer and S. L. Lewis, and the Hostwick estate are the owners of the Baxter mine and George G. Sythorland was their attorney in the recent litigation.

SOME CONFUSION AS TO THE LAWS

TIMELY REVIEW OF THE GAME
LAWS OF STATE.

MANY CHANGES WERE MADE

Legislature Enacted New Laws Which Tend to Confuse the Hunters—Season Opens September 1st.

With the arrival of the hunting season at County Clerk Lee's office and the starting of issuing these permits to kill game it is interesting to note the changes made in the laws of the state. It might be well for the hunters to read the new laws carefully, as the new laws have not yet been related in full and the following summary is most carefully made by Valentine Raeth.

The Changes.
Important changes in the game and fish laws were made by the last legislature and the average sportsman finds considerable trouble in obtaining correct information in regard to them. It is in recognition of this fact that the writer has taken pains to interpret these laws in clear form, so far as the hunter is concerned. If this statement of them is kept for reference it will save the sportsman and game warden department much trouble.

The season for waterfowl, except geese, opens Sept. 1. For inland birds, snipe and quail, Sept. 10.
The deer season has not been changed, but only one deer can be killed.

No pointer or setter dog can be trained or used upon lands frequented by game birds, between Aug. 1 and Sept. 10. Hunting skills or paddle boats can be used for duck hunting. Forty-five brook trout is the limit for any person, instead of ten pounds as in former years.

LIGHTNING BOLT A STRONG PERSUADER

Has "Billy" Sunday Backed into a Corner as an Influence for Repentance and Conversion.

Occupants of the call boy's office at the new yards were treated or mistreated to a fine pyrotechnical display this morning at nine o'clock and in view of the fact that it might have resulted fatally had it not been for sheer good luck, it is hoped that the manifestation of nature's power may have a chastening influence on their lives.

At 11:30 a. m. a companion was standing in the office, which contains three telephones, when a bolt of lightning struck the building and was shunted through the office, presumably by the storm pipe. It leaped from the radiator and midway between the two occupants a large ball of blue flame appeared which burst with a deafening detonation. The room was immediately filled with smoke while blue flashes snaked their way up and down the pipes and through the machine shop. Employees who hastened to the scene, expecting to find a couple of "dead ones" in the room, but were agreeably surprised to find them very much alive and badly frightened. The company telephone was put out of commission by the bolt.

DEATH SUMMONED PERRY C. WILDER

Evansville's Best-Known Citizen Succumbed to an Abscess of the Lungs at Five O'Clock This Morning.

Perry C. Wilder, Evansville's best-known citizen and a man held in the highest regard throughout the county and state, died at five o'clock this morning from the effects of an abscess which had developed in his lungs. He had been in ill health for some time, but few of his friends knew that his condition was in any way critical. The illness therefore comes as a severe shock to his many business and political associates throughout Wisconsin.

Mr. Wilder was born in Granger, Indiana county, Ohio, Nov. 7, 1852, and was the son of Rev. Calvin H. Wilder, a Baptist minister, who lived at Argyle, La Fayette county, from 1844-68 and thereafter, up to the time of his death in 1887, at Evansville. He attended the Evansville seminary, taught school when he was fifteen years of age, and was clerk for L. T. Pullen until the firm was merged into Winston, Pullen & Co., the first banking house of Evansville, and kept the books of this firm until 1873 when he and Charles E. P. Pullen formed a partnership and engaged in a general mercantile business. Subsequently they dissolved partnership and Mr. Wilder entered the employment of E. D. Barnard, a leaf tobacco packer. In 1882 he became a member of the firm and upon Mr. Barnard's retiring from the firm his share, Shasta, taking his place in 1893, the name was changed to Barnard & Wagner. The concern has warehouses at Oregon and Madison as well as at Evansville.

For many years he had taken an active interest in municipal, county and state politics, serving as the president of the village board and first Mayor of Evansville, as clerk of the town of Union and member of the county board, and being vice chairman of the Republican state central committee at the time of his death. He held the postoffice under President Harrison, from 1889 to 1893, resigning on account of pressing business interests. Though active in politics, he made no enemies, and it is said that he was one of the few advisers of Robert M. La Follette, as governor, whose counsels were ever heeded.

He belonged to the Masonic, Odd Fellows, Knights of Pythias, and Knights of the Globe fraternal orders and was a member of Janesville Commandery, Knights Templar, under whose direction the funeral ceremony will be conducted Sunday afternoon.

Mr. Wilder and Miss Alice D. Pease were married June 25, 1890, and the widow and two children survive him. There are also three brothers, Caryl C. Wilder of Denver, Stephen C. of Chicago, and Newton D. of Evansville.

They Do Not Make Love.
This is a wise saying of the Moors: A woman is like your shadow; run away from it and it will follow you; run after it and you can never catch it. The men of Morocco are not lovers, and all the preliminaries of the marriage are arranged by the parents. The women of the family have a very monotonous time, not being allowed to leave the houses.

There is in London a school for mothers. One poor woman was dissolved in tears when her baby was undressed at the hospital and its wasted limbs revealed. She lugubriously explained her grief by saying that "it was a beautiful child last time it was undressed."

CHOLERA COMING ON SHIP, SAYS CONSUL'S MESSAGE

Government Agent at Rotterdam Sends Warning and Uncle Sam Gets Busy.

Washington, Aug. 27.—The government has received warning in a cablegram from Consul Lister at Rotterdam which leads Surgeon General Wyman to believe that one and possibly more of the persons on the Dutch ship Andyk, known bound for Baltimore, is suffering from cholera. The message reads:

"Cholera Andyk Wednesday, Baltimore."

This message is interpreted as meaning that the Andyk sailed from Rotterdam for Baltimore with one or more cases of cholera aboard.

The vessel is a slow steamer and is not expected to arrive off Cape Charles until about September 8. Meanwhile the hospital service will take steps to prevent landing until a thorough investigation shall have been made.

The news had no sooner been received than Surgeon General Wyman cabled for full information as to where the vessel had been; the number of passengers and crew, and the sanitary precautions taken.

Wyman cabled Assistant Surgeon Robert A. C. Wollenburg, stationed at Naples, to proceed at once to Rotterdam to assist American Consul Lister in seeing that the treasury department regulations regarding vessels sailing for the United States are carried out. The greatest precautions are to be taken to prevent the introduction of the disease into the United States.

Rotterdam, Aug. 27.—The burgomaster has announced that four persons have died from cholera, and that out of nine suspected cases now in the isolation house, three had been found to be infected with cholera bacillus. An examination of the others has not yet been concluded. Forty-two apparently healthy persons who have been in contact with those declared infected, are now under observation.

Kills Friends by Mistake.

Newark, Ohio, Aug. 27.—Firing a single charge of buckshot at two supposed chicken thieves, Charles Hartsborn, Sr., instantly killed his nephews, John Wren, and William Truce. For a long time Hartsborn has been molesting chickens. Armed with a gun, he kept watch in his orchard on his farm near here. When two boys appeared in the darkness Hartsborn fired.

OBSERVE HAMLIN'S BIRTHDAY.

Citizens of Maine Honor Centenary of Great Statesman.

Paris, Ill., Aug. 27.—All Maine today paid tribute to the memory of Hannibal Hamlin, one of the greatest statesmen the Pine Tree state ever produced. This is the centenary of Hamlin's birth in Paris, Ill., and the exercises were held in connection with the first "old home week" in Maine. They were witnessed by a large gathering of present and former residents of the state, including many veterans of the civil war who remember Hamlin especially as vice-president during Abraham Lincoln's first term.

The culminating feature of the day's program was the unveiling by the Loyal Legion of a bronze tablet at the house where Hamlin was born.

DE SAGANS ROBBED OF $15,000.

Prince and Princess Victims of Big "Touch" at Rheims.

Paris, Aug. 27.—A local newspaper published a statement that newspaper Helie de Sagan was robbed of $5,000 during her recent stay at Rheims, and her husband, the prince, was at the same time relieved of $10,000. The robbers have not been apprehended.

Prince and Princess de Sagan, went to Rheims to witness the airplane flights.

Rheims, Aug. 27.—Prince and Princess de Sagan deny that they have been robbed. Another report to the effect that Mrs. George Gordon was robbed of her reticule containing jewelry to the value of many thousands of dollars is also denied.

Mrs. Barclay Gives Bond.

Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 27.—Mrs. Stella Barclay of Buffalo, N. Y., held for kidnapping Marian Bleakley, the "Incubator baby," was released on bond late last night. She left at once for Jefferson City to fight against the issuance of requisition papers for her return to Kansas for trial.

BANK ROBBERS ARE CAUGHT.

Minnesota Bandits Are Arrested After an Exciting Chase.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 27.—After a sensational chase in which the entire countryside took part, the two bank robbers who held up Cashier Frank Vesper of the Wayzata State bank at the point of revolvers, were caught, one about a half an hour after the affair, the other several hours later.

The stolen money—$325 in currency—was recovered. The robbers, who confessed, gave their names as George H. Ingalls and Henry Baber.

Vinita, Okla., Aug. 27.—Robbers entered the Missouri, Kansas & Texas railway depot at Big Cabin, killed the safe and escaped with an express package containing $1,005 in currency.

New York, Aug. 27.—A loud report just behind his automobile caused Baron Schlippenbach, the Russian consul general, to leap from the machine on Fifth avenue and grasp the arm of a traffic policeman, Aleck Nittel. The consul general's face was as white as chalk.

"He thought it was a bomb," said Nittel in relating the incident, "but it was only the explosion of one of his rear tires."

Tries to Reach Harriman.

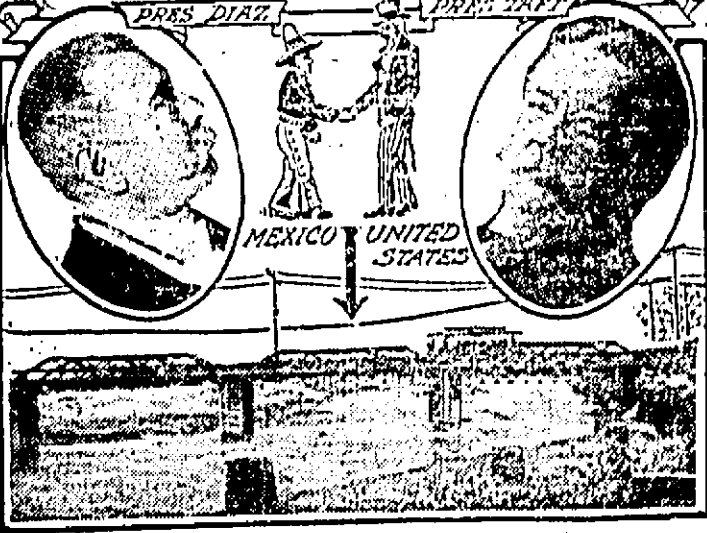

New York, Aug. 27.—An apparently demented man who said he was John Deyo of 245 Wabash avenue, Chicago, was taken into custody at 12 H. Gov. Campbell Stays Away.

El Paso, Tex., Aug. 27.—Gov. Campbell of Texas will not be present in El Paso at the meeting in October of Presidents Taft and Diaz to welcome them to Texas. In a letter to Major Sweeney the governor says it will be impossible for him to be present.

Where the Work Came In.

Mrs. Bacon—"I understand your husband is at work on a new poem?" Mrs. Egbert—"He is. He's trying to get a new magazine to accept it."

WHERE PRESIDENT TAFT WILL GREET PRESIDENT DIAZ IN OCTOBER.

El Paso, Texas.—Clasping hands on the international bridge spanning the muddy waters of the Rio Grande, William H. Taft, president of the United States, and Porfirio Diaz, president of Mexico, will shake hands on Oct. 10 in this city. Neither executive will leave his own country when the ceremony takes place, for each man will stand upon his own territory and the handshaking will take place over the international boundary line. Afterward, standing side by side, each still in his own country, the two presidents will receive and shake hands with the thousands of people who will pass before it. It was originally planned to have a banquet in the center of the bridge and have the two executives of the two greatest nations on the American continent sit beside each other at the table, but this plan has been abandoned in favor of the more democratic one in which the whole people can pass before the two distinguished victors and greet them.

All the original plans for decorating the international bridge for the national colors of the two republics, tanning colors of each nation at the two ends of the bridge and other features planned in connection with the celebration will be carried out. The city council of El Paso has passed an ordinance appropriating just as much money from the city treasury as is necessary for plumbing and carrying out the entertainment for the two presidents and the mayor and his advisory committee of business men and prominent citizens have the power to draw out all they need. The city is going to be anything but parsimonious in the celebration and will make the events a memorable one, but it will be that anyhow, as it is the first time a president of United States ever met a president of Mexico, the great sister republic of the south and the manner of the meeting will be unique and historic.

Each ruler, standing on the side of his own country, will shake hands over the boundary line with the ruler of the other, yet neither will set foot on his own domain. The boundary line will be plainly marked on the bridge and each ruler will stand on

"DEAD MAN" IS STILL ALIVE

FRANK RIEDINGER, ONE OF BELLE GUINNESS' SUPPOSED VICTIMS FOUND.

FRIENDS THOUGHT HIM SLAIN

Suit Filed at Waukesha Reveals Fact That Wisconsin Farmer Did Not Fall Into Clutches of Laporte "Death Farm" Owner.

Waukesha, Wis., Aug. 27.—One of the men supposed to have been slain for his money by Mrs. Belle Guinness and buried on her farm near Laporte, Ind., is alive. He is Frank X. Riedinger of Delafield, Wis., who was supposed to have been among the "death farm" victims.

He has turned up at Fairfield, Clay county, Neb., and has made a claim in county court here for money due him from the sale of the farm, in his affidavit as to his identity, filed in county court, Riedinger names Judge Emil Wallner, Milwaukee, as his attorney and empowers him to collect the money for him.

In December, 1906, Riedinger bought an 80-acre farm in the town of Delafield from John Williams, Jr., for $5,500. To secure the unpaid balance he executed three mortgages, one to John Williams, Jr., for $300; one to Mrs. Williams, Sr., for $1,000, and one to Mary Jones of Wales for $1,500. On February 5, 1907, he disappeared.

Whereabouts Were Mystery.

His whereabouts were a mystery, but he had confided in neighbors that he intended going to some town in Indiana to marry a woman with whom he had become acquainted through a matrimonial advertisement.

A few days later a neighbor, Gabriel Heinzelman, who was caring for his live stock during his absence, received a letter postmarked Chicago, stating that he had changed his mind about getting married and had "gone west."

The letter was unsigned and Heinzelman was not the author.

Before leaving, Riedinger borrowed $200 from a friend and collected several milk checks. Following his disappearance an investigation was made by the German consul at Chicago, but no trace of him could be found.

Mortgages on Farm Foreclosed.

When the trustees of the Guinness farm came to light, friends of Riedinger felt sure that he had fallen a victim to the wiles of the Indiana murderers and he had been murdered as a result.

Two of the mortgages on his farm were foreclosed and July 31, 1907, the farm was sold for $5,200. Out of the proceeds of the sale interest, costs and other expenses were paid and a balance of $523.01 left in the hands of the clerk of courts to Riedinger's account. It is this money to which he has now made claim.

In his affidavit filed in county court, Riedinger also authorizes his attorney to collect from T. E. Ryan of the law firm of Ryan, Morton & Newbury of this city the proceeds of the sale of his live stock and farm products, less the expenses and attorneys' fees. The affidavit makes proof of the identity of Riedinger and the matter will shortly be adjusted in county court.

HOLD NOSES TO UNPACK SKINS.

Trophies Sent by Roosevelt Have a Sickening Odor.

Washington, Aug. 27.—Giving forth sickening odors the skins sent by Col. Theodore Roosevelt from his African hunting trip were unpacked in the taxidermists' shop of the National museum here. The specimens were packed in salt and were in much better condition than that in which skins usually arrive.

The tanning of the hides will be commenced as soon as other work will permit, but it will be many months before the skins are ready to be placed on exhibition.

LIBERTY OF PRESS CUT OFF.

Judge Commands Newspapers Not to Publish Grand Jury Affairs.

Youngstown, O., Aug. 27.—For the first time in the history of Mahoning county newspaper publishers were ordered by a court to refrain from publishing stories regarding the actions of a grand jury.

Judge Robinson issued a special decree, shortly after the grand jury which has the graft investigation in hand convened, saying that no news should be printed about the investigations unless indictments were returned.

Knox to Make River Trip.

THE EVENTFUL NIGHT
IS FAST APPROACHING

Every Indication Points to a Furious But Good Natured Finish—
Great Tug of War Close—Interest Grows Tense.

It is now high time for all contestants to get after the promised ones—only eight days remain.

But little over one week is left before this great Gazette contest will be at a close. The interest is intense, and all the contestants and their friends are breathlessly awaiting the end of the big battle of votes. Almost all are confident of victory and those who are not now in the lead are sure of a fight to the finish some time before the winding up of the contest, votes which they have up their sleeves.

The great contest has now come to the question of days, and from tonight only eight of them remain. "The great good-natured battle of votes" which has extended over the past seven weeks has wrought up more interest than any other contest in the history of journalistic fields ever imagined.
Thousands and thousands of people are interested in the outcome and from the fact that votes and subscriptions have come from hundreds of miles around it is evidence that the contest is not confined to the immediate vicinity of Janesville.

The contest has indeed been an exciting one, and the real tug of war is yet to come. This will be decided next week, and every man, woman and child in Janesville and the surrounding country will wait expectantly
for the result of Saturday, Sept. 4th.
But Eight Days.

Only eight more days remain in the great contest. On Saturday evening, Sept. 4th, it will be determined who will win the three beautiful Newman Brook pianos, three diamond rings,
three necklaces, and three gold watches. The candidates have done nobly up to date, and their efforts are not waning during the remaining days.
Subscriptions are pouring into "The Gazette" office at an unprecedented rate and thousands of votes are going into the reserves. On Saturday night, Sept. 4th, these reserves will be exposed for the first time, and upon them depends largely who will be the lucky contestants. Persons who have promised to vote for some young lady in this contest, should do so by subscribing for "The Gazette" within the next eight days. A little help now will be worth a barrel of consolation
after the race is over.

Eight days is not a very long time, but it is a long time to be filled with the greatest possible interest and enthusiasm on behalf of the general public. There was never a contest held in Janesville which excited the interest of so many people as this contest. And no wonder. There are over one hundred and sixty ladies directly interested in it, and there are hundreds and hundreds of people working for the young ladies. The eight days which remain in this contest will be the most spirited of all and will count more than all the previous time combined.

About Second Payments.

One point that the management feels should be made clear to all contestants, is the manner of issuing votes upon second payment to "The Gazette" by one person, and contestants are requested to note carefully the following: When a person has paid for one yearly subscription to "The Gazette"
during the contest and decides to subscribe for another year, the votes belonging to the payment of the second subscription will amount to the difference between the number of votes given on at the time of the first payment, and the total amount which would have been given had the subscriber turned in the two-year subscription
under the present scale of votes.

For instance: If a man subscribed for "The Gazette" for one year, delivered by mail, before the present doubled scale of votes had been put into effect, votes would have been issued upon the payment of that subscription to the amount of 7,000. Should he decide to take out another year's subscription at this time votes would be issued on the amount of the difference between the 7,000 to which he was entitled upon the first payment and the amount to which he would be entitled by the payment of a two-year's subscription at this time—21,000—or 27,000 votes. "The above, of course, refers to country subscribers. In the city, by the same process, the subscription would be entitled to the difference between the original votes issued,
which would be 14,000, and the total to which he would be entitled for a two-year payment at this time—50,000
—or 46,000 votes.

Contestants will do well at this time to induce subscribers who have purchased a subscription for one year, earlier in the contest, to subscribe for a second year, thereby accruing the same number of votes that would have been secured had they waited until the announcement of the doubled scale of votes.

Read This Carefully.

Any one starting to take the paper
when the contest started will always be considered a new subscriber during the life of the contest, and votes given accordingly. If you start the paper now and pay something in advance and wish to pay more later during the contest, you will receive the same number of votes as a new subscriber.

Future Orders.

Don't give up getting a party as a subscriber, simply because he is already taking some other paper for which he has paid in advance. Turn his subscription to "The Gazette" to begin at the expiration of the other paper, and when that time arrives,
he will begin to receive "The Gazette."

Open Evenings.

For the benefit of those who cannot call during business hours, this office and contest department will be open every evening.

No Long Period Subscriptions Sold.
The motto of our contest is "Pay-now to All" and with this thought in view the management has decided to NOT accept a subscription for a long-term more than two years IN ADVANCE for by so doing it will make it impossible for any contestant to come to the fore at the last moment and purchase a single subscription for an extended length of time which would not an-enormous sum of votes and in some cases probably deprive deserving contestants of the rewards which others who would have been justly theirs. If any of the contestants have been RESTING with the idea that they would come in the last day and take out a number of these subscriptions and thus win a prize, they will now know this is impossible, and if they hope to win they will realize it is not to be done through any way but honest effort.

DIVA'S RUBY

For a moment he did not move. That he was already dead he slowly bent forward from the rock, making a deep obeisance with both arms hanging down before him, so that his body shot down perpendicularly to the sand, where it struck head first, rolled over and lay motionless in a heap. The traveler's was a Mauser pistol that would have killed as surely at 500 yards as at 50; and the bullet had gone through the Tartar's brain.

Baraka sprang up the sandy slope and ran along the narrow beach to the body. In an instant she had detached the large brown water-gourd from the thong by which he had hung over Saad's shoulder, and she felt that it was full. Without a thought for herself she hastened back to the mouth of the cave where the traveler was now standing. His face was dripping with perspiration that ran down into his matted golden beard, his eyes were wild, his hands were bleeding.

"Drink!" cried Baraka joyfully, and she gave him the gourd.

He gripped it as a greedy dog snaps at a bit of meat, and pulling out the wooden plug he set the gourd to his lips, with an expression of beatitude. But he was an old traveler and only drank a little, knowing that his life might depend on making the small supply last. A gourd of water was worth more than many rubles just then.

"Are you very thirsty yet?" he asked in a hoarse voice.

"No," answered Baraka bravely; "keep it for yourself."

His hand closed round the neck of the gourd and he looked up towards the rocks above. The vulture had come back and was circling slowly down.

"You had better bury the body, while I go on working," said the traveler, turning back into the cave and taking the gourd with him.

Baraka had marked the place where he had tried to dig for water and had almost disappeared in the quicksand. She took from the body the wallet, in which were dates and some half-dry bread, and then dragged and pushed and rolled the dead man from the place where he had fallen. The vulture sat on the lowest ledge where his claws could find a hold, and though he watched her with horrible red eyes while she robbed him of his prey, he did not dare go nearer.

The body sank into the moving sand, and Baraka had to roll herself back to firmer ground in haste to escape being swallowed up with the dead man. The last she saw of him was one brown foot sticking up. It sank slowly out of sight, and then she went to the hollow where the ruby mine was and took up a piece of the broken crust, full of precious stones, and threw it at the vulture as hard as she could. It did not hit him, but he at once tumbled off the ledge into the air, opened his queer, bedraggled wings and struck upwards.

Then Baraka sat down in the shade and slowly brushed away the dry sand that had got into the folds of her linen garment, and looked steadily at the mouth of the cave and tried not to realize that her throat was parched and her lips almost cracking with thirst, and that the traveler had a gourd almost full of water with him. For she loved him, and was willing to die that he might live a little longer; besides, if he succeeded in digging his way out, there would be plenty to drink, and when he was free she was sure that he would love her because she had made him so rich.

The sun rose higher and at last shone down to the bottom of the chasm, and she sat in the narrow strip of shade, where she had passed most of the previous day. She was very thirsty and feverish, and felt tired, and wished she could sleep, but could not. Still the traveler toiled in the darkness, and from time to time she heard sounds from far away as of stones and loose earth falling. He was still working hard, for he was very strong and he was desperate.

Baraka thought that if he was able to dig through the dam the water would run in again, and she watched the sand for hours, but it was drier than ever. The shadow broadened again, and crept up the rock quickly as the afternoon passed.

It was a long time since she had heard any sound from the cave; she went to the entrance and listened, but all was quite still. Perhaps the traveler had fallen asleep from exhaustion, too tired even to drag himself out into the air when he could work no longer. She sat down in the entrance and waited.

An hour passed. Perhaps he was dead. At the more inward suggestion Baraka sprang to her feet, and her heart beat frantically, and stood still an instant, and then bent again as if it would burst, and she could hardly breathe. She stooped herself against the rock, and then went in to know the truth, feeling her way, and instinctively shading her eyes as many people do in the dark.

A breath of cool air made her open them, and to her amazement there was light before her. She thought she must have turned quite round while she was walking, and that she was going back to the entrance, so she turned again. But in a few seconds there was light before her once more, and soon she saw the dry sand, full of her footprints and the traveler's, and then the hollow where the mine was came in sight.

She retraced her steps a second time, saw the light as before, ran forward on the smooth sand and stumbled upon a heap of earth and stones, just as she saw the sky through an irregular opening on the level of her face, scarcely believing her senses she thrust out her hand towards the hole. It was real, and she was not dreaming.

Baraka crept up the slope of earth as quickly as she could and got out; if she had hoped to find him waiting for her she was disappointed, for he was nowhere to be seen. He had got clear away, with his camel-bag full of rubles. A moment later she was lying on the ground, with her face in the stream, drinking her fill, and forgetful even of the man she loved. In order to deprive them of water the men had dug a channel by which it ran down directly from the spring to the ravine on that side; then they had blocked up the entrance with stones and earth, believing that one man's strength could never suffice to break through, and they had gone away. They had probably buried or burnt Baraka's clothes, for she did not see them anywhere.

She ate some of the dates from the dead man's wallet, and a bit of the dry black bread, and felt revived, since her greatest need had been for water, and that was satisfied. But when she had eaten and drunk, and had washed herself in the stream and twined up her hair, she sat down upon a rock; and she felt so tired that she would have fallen asleep if the pain in her heart had not kept her awake. She clasped her hands together on her knees and bent over them, rocking herself.

When nearly an hour had passed she looked up and saw that the sun was sinking, for the shadows were turning purple in the deep gorge, and there was a golden light on the peaks above. She listened then, holding her breath; but there was no sound except the tinkling of the tiny stream as it fell over a ledge at some distance below her, following its new way down into the valley.

She rose at last, looked upward, and seemed about to go away when a thought occurred to her, which afterwards led to very singular consequences. Instead of going down the valley or climbing up out of it, she went back to the entrance of the cave, taking the wallet with her, dragged herself in once more over the loose stones and earth, reached the secret hollow where the pool had been, and made straight for the little mine of precious stones. The traveler had broken out many more than he had been able to carry, but she did not try to collect them all. She was not altogether ignorant of the trade carried on by the men of her family for generations, and though she had not the least idea of the real value of the finest of the rubies, she knew very well that it would be wise to take many small ones which she could exchange for clothing and necessities with the first women she met in the hills, while hiding the rest of the supply she would be able to carry in the wallet.

When she had made her wise selection, she looked once more towards the quicksand, and left the place for ever. Once outside she began to climb the rocks as fast as she could, for very soon it would be night and she would have to lie down and wait many hours for the day, since there was no moon, and the way was very dangerous, even for a Tartar girl who could almost tread on air.

High up on the mountain, over the dry well where Baraka and the stranger had been imprisoned, the vulture perched alone with empty claw and drooping wings. But it was of no use for him to wait; the living, who might have died of hunger and thirst, were gone, and the body of dead Saad lay fathoms deep in the quicksand, in the very jaws of the mountain.

CHARGES CROSS EXTRAVAGANCE.
Congressman Says Canal Commission Buys Too Much Paint.

New York, Aug. 27.—Representative William S. Bennett, in a letter to the secretary of war, charges the purchasing department of the Isthmian Canal commission with gross extravagance and favoritism in connection with the purchase of paint used for the barges, dredges and other vessels engaged in canal work.

"It is reasonable to assume," the letter concludes, "that a purchasing department which has bought nearly fourteen times as much of an article as was necessary and under circumstances where apparently it could not be used, is engaged in other similar and possibly larger transactions."

LIGHTNING KILLS; 1,000 IN PANIC.
Crowd at Baseball Game Sees a Player Struck Dead.

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 27.—In full view of 1,000 persons, William Bedford of Calro, Ill., second baseman of the Cuban Giants baseball team, was instantly killed by lightning at Inlet park during practice before the game with Atlantic City.

The ball struck the ground close to the ball player and ran through the spikes of his shoes and into his body. Walter Gordon, shortstop of the team, and Charles Polls, catcher, were knocked down but unharmed. The spectators in the stands were thrown into a panic, but none was injured.

Invents Hoopskirt and Airship.
Washington, Aug. 27.—From hoopskirt, with knuckle attachment, to airship, ran the story of the inventive genius of Capt. J. E. Chase, union army veteran, now here from his home in Veterans City, Fla. He has just secured a patent on his airship, and it makes the forty-seventh that the patent office has dealt out to him.

Denies Purchase of Railroad.
Mexico City, Aug. 27.—Ambassador David R. Thompson emphatically denies the report that he had purchased the Pan American railroad for $10,000,000, acting as the agent for E. H. Harriman. He declares he is in no way connected with Mr. Harriman and that he had not purchased the railroad, but is trying to do so.

THIRD OPERATION PREVENTED
By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Chicago, Ill. — "I want to tell you what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. I was so sick that two of the best doctors in Chicago said I would die if I did not have an operation. I had already had two operations, and they wanted me to go through a third one. I suffered day and night from inflammation and a small tumor, and never thought of seeing a well day again. A friend told me how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had helped her, and I tried it, and after the third bottle was cured." — Mrs. ALYSSA SPENCER, 11 Langdon Street, Chicago, Ill.

If you are ill do not drag along at home or in your place of employment until an operation is necessary, but build up the system, and remove the cause of these distressing ulcers and pains by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs.

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

Went to the Entrance and Listened.
Ing; the traveler had got out and was gone, recking little of what might happen to her, since he was free with his treasure.

Baraka crept up the slope of earth as quickly as she could and got out; if she had hoped to find him waiting for her she was disappointed, for he was nowhere to be seen. He had got clear away, with his camel-bag full of rubles. A moment later she was lying on the ground, with her face in the stream, drinking her fill, and forgetful even of the man she loved. In order to deprive them of water the men had dug a channel by which it ran down directly from the spring to the ravine on that side; then they had blocked up the entrance with stones and earth, believing that one man's strength could never suffice to break through, and they had gone away. They had probably buried or burnt Baraka's clothes, for she did not see them anywhere.

She ate some of the dates from the dead man's wallet, and a bit of the dry black bread, and felt revived, since her greatest need had been for water, and that was satisfied. But when she had eaten and drunk, and had washed herself in the stream and twined up her hair, she sat down upon a rock; and she felt so tired that she would have fallen asleep if the pain in her heart had not kept her awake. She clasped her hands together on her knees and bent over them, rocking herself.

When nearly an hour had passed she looked up and saw that the sun was sinking, for the shadows were turning purple in the deep gorge, and there was a golden light on the peaks

above. She listened then, holding her breath; but there was no sound except the tinkling of the tiny stream as it fell over a ledge at some distance below her, following its new way down into the valley.

She rose at last, looked upward, and seemed about to go away when a thought occurred to her, which afterwards led to very singular consequences. Instead of going down the valley or climbing up out of it, she went back to the entrance of the cave, taking the wallet with her, dragged herself in once more over the loose stones and earth, reached the secret hollow where the pool had been, and made straight for the little mine of precious stones. The traveler had broken out many more than he had been able to carry, but she did not try to collect them all. She was not altogether ignorant of the trade carried on by the men of her family for generations, and though she had not the least idea of the real value of the finest of the rubies, she knew very well that it would be wise to take many small ones which she could exchange for clothing and necessities with the first women she met in the hills, while hiding the rest of the supply she would be able to carry in the wallet.

When she had made her wise selection, she looked once more towards the quicksand, and left the place for ever. Once outside she began to climb the rocks as fast as she could, for very soon it would be night and she would have to lie down and wait many hours for the day, since there was no moon, and the way was very dangerous, even for a Tartar girl who could almost tread on air.

High up on the mountain, over the dry well where Baraka and the stranger had been imprisoned, the vulture perched alone with empty claw and drooping wings. But it was of no use for him to wait; the living, who might have died of hunger and thirst, were gone, and the body of dead Saad lay fathoms deep in the quicksand, in the very jaws of the mountain.

Congressman Says Canal Commission Buys Too Much Paint.

New York, Aug. 27.—Representative William S. Bennett, in a letter to the secretary of war, charges the purchasing department of the Isthmian Canal commission with gross extravagance and favoritism in connection with the purchase of paint used for the barges, dredges and other vessels engaged in canal work.

"It is reasonable to assume," the letter concludes, "that a purchasing department which has bought nearly fourteen times as much of an article as was necessary and under circumstances where apparently it could not be used, is engaged in other similar and possibly larger transactions."

The ball struck the ground close to the ball player and ran through the spikes of his shoes and into his body. Walter Gordon, shortstop of the team, and Charles Polls, catcher, were knocked down but unharmed. The spectators in the stands were thrown into a panic, but none was injured.

THIRD OPERATION PREVENTED
By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Chicago, Ill. — "I want to tell you what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. I was so sick that two of the best doctors in Chicago said I would die if I did not have an operation. I had already had two operations, and they wanted me to go through a third one. I suffered day and night from inflammation and a small tumor, and never thought of seeing a well day again. A friend told me how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had helped her, and I tried it, and after the third bottle was cured." — Mrs. ALYSSA SPENCER, 11 Langdon Street, Chicago, Ill.

If you are ill do not drag along at home or in your place of employment until an operation is necessary, but build up the system, and remove the cause of these distressing ulcers and pains by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs.

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

To know when you are wrong is a fine art.
To admit you are wrong is a fine trait.

And of all of the qualities that spoil good comradeship I think a pigheaded unwillingness to ever acknowledge a mistake or be convinced in an argument is surely one of the worst.

I know a man—probably you do too—who was ever known to admit he was wrong.

The boast of this particular specimen of the class was that he had never asked anyone's pardon and never would.

Being fallible, like the rest of the world, he was occasionally in the wrong. But in all my acquaintance with him I never knew him to admit it.

He is one of the kindest men I ever knew and one of the most thoughtful for others. But the sense of injustice his attitude provoked often made me forget all his kindness and I know many other people who had the same experience.

"My wife had a girl friend who always used to boast she would never be sensible," a man said to me the other day. "When she passed to Europe we all told her she would surely be sensible then." He paused. "And was she?" I inquired. "Oh, no," he said, with the tightening of the lips that mean a man's marvelling at the woman's inconsistency. "Oh, no, she was ill and confined to her room all the way across, but that was because she ate something just before she started that disagreed with her. Oh, no, she wasn't sensible. You'd get your head taken right off if you suggested that."

Of course, being a man, he contributed that unwillingness to be convinced to the peculiar formation of the feminine mind.

But from all the experience I've had the "woman convinced against her will, whose of the same opinion still," is just as apt to be a man.

It was a man who contributed this little example of pigheadedness and incidentally something of a ball.

We waited for a car. A girl who I asserted was Mary Brooks was waiting on the opposite side of the street.

She had changed much since we had both known her in school days and the man insisted it was not Mary Brooks.

We argued the matter pro and con. Finally I volunteered to go across and ask her. I had and returned triumphant with the news that it was really she.

"The man eyed her incredulously. "Mary Brooks was always such a nice little girl," he said. "I should hate to think she was lying."

Wouldn't he and the sensible lady make a splendid pair?

The person who can—and will—say, "I was wrong," whenever occasion demands is a pleasant person to live with.

If you don't belong to that class try this experiment some day. Listen to the other fellow's argument, not because you have to but because you want to see if he's right.

And if he is, tell him so and see if you don't like the sensation. It will be a novel one, anyway.

THEATRE

This evening Janesville theatre-goers are to be treated to an unusual incident in theatrical circles by this city being made the scene of the initial performance of an opera which is predicted will be one of the sensations of the coming season. "Lo," whistled for months to come, O. Henry and Franklin P. Adams, the two authors who wrote the book and lyrics, and A. Baldwin Sloan, who set it to music, all have national reputations—the first two as story-writers, the latter as a musician of rare ability.

EDWARD P. TEMPLE, WHO STAGED THE NEW MUSICAL COMEDY, "LO," WHICH APPEARS AT THE MYERS THEATRE TONIGHT

The musical comedy which the Janesville Lodge of Elks stand sponsor for is one of those new musical comedies that has a story running through it. It is a play with a plot, is a musical comedy with an interesting story running through it. It is a performance with good music, a performance that did fair to be sung and him a few feet further but were finally stopped. The little boy stuck to the seat and escaped injury. It was an exceedingly narrow escape from serious results.

Accident.—A little fourteen months old child of Mrs. C. H. Jones fell out of a second story window this morning at the residence of Col. Scribner where Mrs. J. is visiting. The child was apparently not much injured.

Pocket Picked.—While attending to his duties as assessor at the Heintz street grocery store on Wednesday evening, Mr. S. H. Holmberg, Jr., had his pocket picked of a wallet containing some $10 in money, a check for $500 and some other valuable papers. The pocket book was afterward found, the check of the money, but with the purse in it, where it had been dropped through a grating in the sidewalk near the store.

graphers and verse makers none enjoys wider popularity than Franklin P. Adams, the "always in good humor" man of the New York Evening Mail, who, in conjunction with O. Henry has written the book and lyrics for "Lo," the new musical comedy whose premiere performance will mark the opening of the Davidson theatre season Sunday evening. Mr. Adams' lyrics for "Lo" are characterized by his well known crisp humor and clever verbiage and they are of much higher quality than the average musical comedy song. One of the best of them is "Little Old Main Street," while "Tummy on Parade," "You Can Be My Little Sweetheart," and several others, have a dash and swing that adds fair to make them unusually popular. The musical setting by Baldwin Sloan is in the best vein of this adept composer.

When they met, he stopped and took the children in, the boy sitting on the seat and the baby to the man that is paying rent, to the man that is raising poor crops, to the hard working tenant and to the speculator:

Do you know that there is an opportunity awaiting you today?

I am offering to you today the best investment that was ever offered to any man.

I will sell to you and give choice out of 40,000 acres of fine agricultural and grazing land, also timber land in 40-acre tracts and upwards for $12.50 per acre, one-quarter payment down, located in the heart of Wisconsin, the leading dairy state of the United States.

Has there ever been an offer made to equal this? No, of course not.

It will put the wise man on the road to independence, if he will grasp this wonderful opportunity. Stop to consider and investigate.

This land lies in the beautiful county of Clark and is surrounded with fine schools, creameries, cheese factories and possesses some as fine roads as can be seen anywhere.

It is the most sensible investment of the 20th century.

This land when developed will be worth from $100.00 to $150.00, which is the price of some of the improved farms today.

REMEMBER, that this opportunity will not last long. Just as soon as one-quarter of this land is sold the price will soar up to $20 per acre, which is the normal price.
